How did the Fund perform during the reporting period?

This is the first year of the Fund which was launched partially through the year on June 21, 2024.

The performance of the Fund was 25.56% from inception to January 31, 2025 compared to the benchmark performance (SPXTR) of 14.38%.

Key Factors Affecting Performance:

- The largest position in the portfolio TSLA contributed meaningfully to performance over the period. This was from a revised sentiment around AI capabilities and improved market belief in the potential near-term economic impact of technologies outside of their traditional automotive manufacturing business lines.
- The second largest position AMZN performed reasonably well to the portfolio and added positive attribution. Margin expansion in their existing retail business buoyed by higher profitability through advertising and cost control, re-acceleration of cloud business — was somewhat tempered by large CAPEX outlays expected in fiscal year 2025.
- Strong performance and contribution from the basket of financial equities (MS, GS, SCHW, BLK) held in the portfolio. Deal making has been historically repressed for several years affecting one of their most profitable business lines. Deal flow had begun to pick up throughout the year and there was strong multiple revision post-election anticipating a more favorable dealmaking environment.
- The largest drag on performance came from MGM, ABNB and QCOM. With MGM and ABNB struggling on difficult market comps from a period of heightened travel. And QCOM suffering from market concern about pivoting business to new product lines and a potential dissolution or reduction of business with AAPL.
- Positive market momentum provided a tailwind for the portfolio as indices as a whole rose during the relevant period.
- At a high level the portfolio contains — hospitality, gaming, real world AI, financial services and semiconductor manufacturing at the moment. These all performed reasonably well during the relevant time period.
